Full description

Experience Patagonia from the river on a multi-day private fly-fishing expedition. We'll explore remote areas with very low fishing pressure on the Limay, Manso, Collón Curá, or Caleufú rivers, accompanied by a professional guide and with one drift boat for every two anglers.

While you fish downstream, the supply boat and support team move ahead to set up the next camp. Upon arrival, you'll find fully equipped private tents, a dining area, kitchen, shower, dry gear, and Starlink internet. Each day combines fishing, open landscapes, Patagonian meals, and evenings around the campfire.

This itinerary is a basic 3-day, 2-night trip. We can design longer trips, combine different rivers, and tailor the logistics to your group size, the anglers' experience, and seasonal conditions.

The listed price is an estimate per person based on double occupancy for a three-day expedition. Collón Curá and Caleufú require a higher rate due to distance and additional logistics.

What's included

Transfers to and from your lodging in Bariloche; professional bilingual guide; drift boat and supply boat; support crew; private tent for every two people with cots, air mattresses, sleeping bags, and pillows; dining area, kitchen, and shower; all meals and selected beverages; fishing gear when needed; Starlink internet.

Not included

Fishing permit (USD 40 per person per day; we can arrange this); tips for guides and camp staff; flights and lodging before or after the expedition.

Meeting point

Pickup at the traveler's accommodation in downtown San Carlos de Bariloche. The time and boarding location will be confirmed based on the river and the chosen itinerary.
